About Conference

Scisynopsis extends a global invitation to all participants for our upcoming “3rd European Congress on Chemistry and Applied Sciences, scheduled for June 24-25, 2024, in Amsterdam, Netherlands”. The event encompasses engaging Keynote Speaker presentations, Oral talks, Poster presentations, and an exhibition, all centred around the theme “Unveiling the Prospects of Chemistry & Applied Sciences in 2024.” This congress serves as a platform for embracing new developments, exchanging innovative ideas, and showcasing exploration results in the field of Chemistry.

The Chemistry Congress facilitates the development of ideas, providing early-career scientists the opportunity to interact with a diverse community of experimenters and decision-makers, thus enriching their knowledge base. This conference serves as a comprehensive hub for acquiring abundant knowledge within a singular venue. Each iteration of the conference series has featured distinguished addresses, keynote sessions, special discussions, workshops, contributed papers, and the participation of esteemed delegates, directors, co-directors, professors, scientists, associate professors, Ph.D. students, and researchers.

The Chemistry Congress has a global outreach, and we sincerely hope that amidst your busy schedule, you can allocate time to attend this meeting, contribute your insights on a topic of your interest, and become an integral part of this thriving and successful conference. We eagerly anticipate your presence and participation in Amsterdam.

About Amsterdam

Amsterdam is the capital and largest city of the Netherlands. It is known for its rich history, picturesque canals, and vibrant culture. It is often called the “Venice of the North” because of its extensive canal system. The city is built on a network of canals, and these waterways are a defining feature of its landscape. Visitors can enjoy boat tours and scenic walks along the canals. The city is renowned for its well-preserved historic architecture, including 17th-century canal houses, traditional Dutch buildings, and iconic landmarks like the Anne Frank House and the Royal Palace. Amsterdam boasts world-class museums, including the Rijksmuseum, the Van Gogh Museum, and the Stedelijk Museum, which house impressive art collections. The Anne Frank House and the Rembrandt House Museum are also popular attractions. It offers a wide range of international cuisine, and its food scene reflects its multicultural population. Traditional Dutch foods like herring and stroopwafels can be found alongside dishes from all over the world. The Netherlands is famous for its tulips, and Amsterdam hosts the Bloemenmarkt, a floating flower market, where visitors can purchase a variety of bulbs and flowers. It hosts numerous cultural events and festivals throughout the year, such as King’s Day (Koningsdag) and the Amsterdam Light Festival. The city has a reputation for its liberal and open-minded atmosphere.
